

I would urge Health Canada to reassess the details concerning Safety Code 6.

The model used for evaluation is a 200lb man...how does this relate to babies, children and women, especially pregnant ones?

The exposure measured was 6 minutes only. How does that relate to the constant exposure in our schools, shops, homes, etc.

studies need to be relevant to use of wi-fi in 2014.

Please reassess the information you base your decision on, it does not add up and Canadians are not being properly advised or protected. Isn't this the mandate of Health Canada to all Canadians?
